Bali pass was an old trekking course from the Tons waterway valley to the Yamuna stream valley. It keeps on pulling in trekkers during the storm season when the snow softens and the pass is receptive from both sides. The pass is progressively congenial from the Har-ki-Dun valley as the inclination is little and gives great time for the trekkers to adjust to the elevation. The trek begins from Sankri and goes through the Govind National Park, which is acclaimed for its wild blossoms. It additionally offers one a chance to visit the holy lake at Ruinsara in transit and to investigate the less voyaged way over Yamunotri go to Yamunotri sanctuary.

The knolls close to the lake are a perfect spot to rest and investigate the close by pinnacles and passes. Another feature of this trek is that it gives one the experience of outdoors over 4,000 m. The territory is encompassed by Banderpoonch range and a portion of the popular pinnacles are Kalanag, Banderpoonch West and Ruinsara. This area was made well known by Jack Gibson, an instructor at the Doon school in the late 1940s. The encompassing pinnacles and icy masses in the Swargarohini Range and Banderpoonch range are a mountain climber's pleasure.

Bali Pass is an amazing high height go at 5000 mts offering amphitheater perspectives on Kala Nag, Banderpoonch and Swargarohini tops. The trek to Bali Pass offer entrancing Himalayan perspectives that takes one through verdant knolls, rich green valleys, segregated and impossible to miss Jaunsari villas and betrayed territories to arrive at Bali Pass.

Wooden design of Jaunsar towns, dreamlike Ruinsara Lake and a visit to Yamunotri Temple makes Bali Pass an absolute necessity do high elevation trek.
